GERMANY FIGHTING IN U. S. CONGRESS

Resolutions in Both Houses Attempt to Prohibit Shipping of War Supplies

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—The German secret service is working vigilantly in the United States to disclose the enormous orders for war supplies placed in this country for use by the allied armies of Europe. The information secured is being presented to the government in Washington as an argument in favor of Germany's demand upon President Wilson to stop the exportation of munitions of war.

Resolutions to this effect have been presented in both Houses of Congress. Representatives Barthold and Vollmar, in the lower House, and Senator Hitchcock, in the Senate, are the chief supporters of the resolutions.

A list of guns and ammunition orders has been completed by the German secret service, giving detailed amounts and names of manufacturers.

SAYS ALLIES HELPLESS.
In contending for prohibition of these exports, Germany argues that Russia possesses practically but one arms factory, the Putlow works, and is dependent on this country for war munitions. England is alleged to be unable to manufacture at home sufficient arms and ammunition to supply her increased army. France has small arms factories, but is in need of heavy field howitzers.

In the case as presented by Germany there is the following extraordinary peace argument coming from the most warlike nation in the world:

"While, in the report, orders for artillery ammunition do not seem to play an important part, the orders placed cover the whole output of the combined American factories for the next two and one-half years.

This seems to show that the Allies are determined to carry on the war beyond this period with the help of American industry."

LIST OF ORDERS.
German's secret service "Report on Arms and Ammunition ordered by the Allies in the United States" is as follows:

Two hundred thousand rifles, calibre .303 from the Remington Arms Company.
Two hundred million cartridges, (alleged to be dum dum), from the Union Metallic Cartridge Company.

Two hundred thousand rifles, calibre .302, and 200,000 cartridges from the Winchester Arms Company.
Total output of artillery cartridge cases from the Union Metallic Cartridge Company.

Four million pounds of powder from the duPont Powder Company.
Five hundred machine guns from the Colt Works (larger orders pending).

Two thousand armored motorcars, with machine guns, from the Autocar Company.
Five hundred thousand rifles, calibre .22 and ammunition for drilling purposes from the Winchester Arms Company.

Nine hundred six-inch Howitzers, delivery within 18 months, from the Bethlehem Steel Company.
Shell cases for the Howitzers, from the same company.

Two hundred thousands of powder from the duPont Powder Company.
One hundred thousand Remington rifles, calibre .303, and 15,000,000 cartridges, from the Remington Company.
One hundred thousand carbines, calibre .30-40, from the Winchester Repeating Arms Company.

One hundred million cartridges for the above carbines.
Aeroplanes from various firms. Ten aeroplanes were shipped per steamship Novgorod. Sellers the Wright Company.

Four million aerial arrows and artillery ammunition estimated value $12,000,000, from the Crucible Steel Company.
